

There is no reason that any entity with the means should not be able to broadcast locally relevant information. This is especially true when that is only available as a paid service to a specific group of listeners that have the ability to choose whether or not they will listen. Only if this entity chooses to illegally transmit copyrighted information should they be subject to legal recrimination. I urge you to please protect the rights of the consumer in this matter and deny the NAB petition 04-160.
